

The Problem with Language Learning in the Modern Era - Problem Statement (in Detail)

One of the biggest pitfalls for those who are new to language learning, or even those who are seasoned learners, is finding adequate learning resources. While there are many learning resource websites for various foreign languages, often times learning material for various aspects of a language (grammar, pronunciation, vocabulary etc.) are spread out across various websites, with learners having to venture through different websites to find particular pieces of information, which takes even more time. With the lack of dedicated comprehensive learning websites, language learners may end up with holes in their knowledge in certain aspects of a language.